Neil Burnell

Wistman's Wood in Dartmoor, Devon, England, has been the backdrop of countless folktales and myths involving the spiritual and supernatural. For his ongoing project titled Mystical, British photographer Neil Burnell has been visiting the forest and capturing the foggy, misty, twisted wood that has sparked wonder over the ages. The wood of dwarf oak trees is covered with mossy boulders and thick tree roots. The branches of the trees add an eerie look as they twist about in every which way overhead.

Burnell tells Colossal that although he has visited the wood around 20 times in just the past year, it has only been misty on two of the trips. He also tries to visit during blue hour immediately before the sun rises in the morning. The photographer says he'll continue to visit Wistman's Wood and hunt for the right weather and lighting conditions to add to this series. You can follow along and find more of Burnell's work on his website, Facebook, Twitter, and Instagram.

DPS WHAT'S ON IN FEBRUARY

5th February - Members Evening - Surgery Session.

19th February - Members Evening - 10 in 10.

26th February - Guest Speaker - Leicester LoFi - Daryl Tebbut.

Welcome to Leicester Lo-Fi Photography.

We are a Leicester based group that embrace the traditional aspects of photography by using old film cameras, toy cameras, pin holes, alternative processes and darkroom printing.

We started in 2011 with no place to call a home, but we managed to hold workshops and events at any place that would have us, and let us convert toilets and cupboards into darkrooms.

Since then moved into accommodation and build a community darkroom, At the Manor House off Narborough Road.

In April 2017, we were forced to vacated the Manor House and started to look for a new darkroom space. In December of the same year we opened our new darkroom at 376A Western Road (LE3 0ED)

We're a very social group and our evening sessions and workshops are very relaxed and informal, and a great place to come and learn new skills and techniques you might have never heard of.
