BREAKING OUT

Colin and Christine's joint photographic exhibition

Saturday 2 March - Thursday 14 March

Colin and Christine's "Breaking Out" exhibition opened on Saturday 2 March and it proved to be a special treat, the work on display was interesting in style and presentation with the two photographers work complimenting each others style, a feat not often carried through to success. It's difficult to be objective when reviewing our friends work but in this case its a pleasure, the amount of creative energy required in the production planing and curating of an exhibition is a marathon of never ending hard work.

Colin and Christine have achieved something special, the gallery had a great atmosphere with the work being shown at it's best. Make sure you don't miss this show, I will be visiting again as the work deserves a second look.

Members who attended the launch on Saturday 2 March were impressed with the interesting mix of photography and the ways that Christine and Colin had each presented their images. If you visit this free exhibition, you will be able to judge for yourself how well Colin has chosen the frames for his mounted images. Christine has chosen to show most of her images as canvases. If you haven't tried this yourself, you will be able to ask her advice on the approach she has taken to her choice of presentation styles. And look out for the cushions!

Christine and/or Colin will be present throughout the exhibition to answer all the questions you are bound to have about how they have achieved such a variety of styles of exhibits.

All the photographs were taken by Mike Fuller using a vintage iPhone and processed in a traditional solution of snapseed.

Chris Baldwin's Stellar Eagles

Chris Baldwin's Stellar Eagles exhibition remains on display until Friday 8 March at Cafe Red, Castle Quay, Banbury which is on the canal side underneath the Banbury Museum.
